The History of PACIFIC PRESS & SHORELINE WEST

Our Spring 2022 Meeting

Top: Pacific Press on Villa Street in 1903. Bottom: West side of Bailey Avenue at Dana Street c. 1970

Join us on Saturday, April 30 for our spring meeting and discover the intertwined history of one of Mtn. View's oldest neighborhoods and the city's first major industrial operation, the Pacific Press Publishing Association!

When the Pacific Press, a publishing house owned by the Seventh Day Adventist Church, moved from Oakland to Mountain View in 1904, it transformed the small town (population ~600) by bringing with it 100 Adventist families. The sudden influx of this sizeable new contingent of residents changed Mountain View physically, politically, and socially. The Adventist community built a church, schools, and dozens of homes in the neighborhood immediately south of the Pacific Press campus on Villa Street. Although this neighborhood, now known as Shoreline West, has changed a great deal over the decades, many reminders of its fascinating history can still be found throughout the neighborhood.

At our April 30 webinar, Mountain View historian Nick Perry will share a photo slide show that brings the history of Pacific Press and Shoreline West to light. We will also be joined by representatives from the Shoreline West Association of Neighbors (aka "SWAN") who will share the history and current happenings of their neighborhood organization, founded in 1994.

And the following day, Sunday, May 1, the MVHA is excited to join SWAN at the neighborhood's annual ice cream social at Mariposa Park, located at 305 Mariposa Avenue. Between 2:00 and 4:00 p.m., come to our table to say hello to some of our friendly MVHA volunteers and see our historic display. We hope to see you there!

President's Message

Pamela Baird

Starting over? A fresh start? A new beginning?

The recent Mountain View Multicultural Festival was a wonderful way to connect with recent immigrants or discuss the sometimes distant family history of those visiting our booth. The world map displayed in the MVHA booth gave people the chance to mark the many countries from which their families (or themselves) originate.

Starting over, a fresh start, a new beginning or better opportunities are many times the motivator for immigrating to the United States. The chance to have a better life has been the compelling reason that many of our ancestors and recent immigrants as well, have ventured so far to settle in the United States.

My paternal great grandparents left far northern Germany to settle first in Cleveland and later in Chicago. The town from which they emigrated, Barth, was a small but prosperous sea faring community. The family lore is that my great grandfather was tired of going to sea, so he and his wife and two small boys sailed to America. After their arrival in Cleveland the two boys died, and several years later they moved to Chicago, where they started a new family.

In 2018 I was able to visit Barth and see the tiny house (now enlarged) where they lived. What compelled them to make such a long journey, knowing that they would probably never see their families again? I wish that I could know more about why and how they and my other ancestors left northern Europe. If only records or journals had been kept about their journeys, so that their descendants could know the stories behind their momentous and probably difficult decisions to leave.

The same is true for the movement of people to different areas of our vast country. I, like many people, moved to California to pursue a business opportunity, one that probably would not have been available to me had I stayed in Colorado, where I was born. I never imagined that I would ever move from Colorado, but when an unsolicited opportunity arrived, my ex-husband and I moved here in a matter of months.

But thank goodness, people have made decisions to immigrate or move. For several centuries the United States has benefitted from the energy, perseverance, and hard work of the many people who have decided to start a new life in a different country or area. As I have remarked in previous messages- write it down! Tell the story of your family or yourself so that others will know about your journeys of a new beginning.

And speaking of new beginnings, it's not just individuals that can have a new beginning, it's also companies. The Pacific Press Publishing Company, the subject of our upcoming April 30 general meeting, had to start again multiple times after relocating to Mountain View from Oakland in 1904. The 1906 earthquake and a devastating fire months later nearly destroyed the Pacific Press entirely, but it persevered, remaining one of Mountain View's major employers into the 1980s. I hope you join us April 30 on Zoom to learn about the fascinating story of the Pacific Press and the Shoreline West area of Mountain View.

Board Members Honored

By Nick Perry
MVHA Past President

Two of our MVHA board members recently received some well-deserved honors! State Senator Josh Becker named Emily Ramos the 2022 Woman of the Year for California's Senate District 13 for her work as a volunteer devoted to protecting the rights of tenants and ensuring access to stable housing. Jamil Shaikh was honored by the Mountain View Chamber of Commerce at their annual Celebration of Leaders for his years of dedicated volunteer service. Congrats, Emily and Jamil, and thank you for all you do to make Mountain View a better place!

Share Your MV Housing Stories

By IdaRose Sylvester
MVHA Membership Commitee Chair

On Thursday, May 19, 2022 at 6:30 p.m. the MVHA is co-hosting an event with Mountain View's Human Relations Commission and Stanford University: Understanding the History of Housing in Mountain View: Stories of Racism, Anti-Discrimination, and Movement towards Inclusion.

Mountain View has always been a diverse community, but over the years, discrimination has and continues to exist. This event specifically explores the history of racism in housing and shares stories of exclusion in Mountain View. Part presentation, part interactive discussion among participants, this will be a lively, informative evening. The inspiration for this event is Richard Rothstein's groundbreaking bestseller, The Color of Law, which explores both formal and informal ways communities have been shaped by housing discrimination.

We are excited to be including personal histories about housing discrimination, inclusion, and activism in our community, and are looking for participants who have experiences in Mountain View from any period in the past, up through the present time. The surveys can be accessed via https://forms.gle/xPoeETqkUjW313is7 (English), https://forms.gle/ULsvzB2YW6YGzpaS6 (Spanish), https://forms.gle/aVxqrN4itFz1oX3y6 (Chinese), and https://forms.gle/TFokHyGc4y9wdmPL8 (Russian). Survey respondents can have direct experiences, or reflections on friends and family that they've heard. Surveys must be submitted by May 1. The team is also looking for people to interview about their experiences.

If you have questions about registering for the event, supporting the survey, or sharing your story in an interview, please reach out to MVHA board member and Human Relations Commissioner, IdaRose Sylvester at idarose@siliconvalleylink.com, or phone/text 408-504-9860.

Finding Your Family History

By Robert Cox
MVHA Vice President

One of the newer most exciting methods of finding your family history is through DNA testing. This is especially true if one of your recent ancestors is unknown to you or came from a family that did not leave behind property records, wills, or other key documents to establish family relationships.

The most common DNA test is autosomal. It looks for DNA sequences shared by people who have taken the test. It is best at identifying people who are third cousins or closer but can even identify relatives whose common ancestor is as many as six generations back. In my case, DNA testing has put me in touch with relatives of my mysterious great-grandmother Eliza (Payne) Cox. We believe that she was left by her parents to be raised in a Shaker community around Cleveland, Ohio, because they were too poor to care for her. My cousins through her now live in Michigan, Texas, Oklahoma, Canada, England, and Australia. I continue my collaborative research with one of them, Lucy Baker, who has almost 30,000 profiles in her Ancestry family tree.

The three main companies providing autosomal testing are Ancestry, My Heritage, and 23 & Me. Each has its pluses. For those who have ancestors in the United States or other English-speaking countries and are interested in finding the exact connections to their cousins, Ancestry is generally the best choice. For those with recent ancestors from Europe or Israel, My Heritage is often a better choice. Finally, 23 & Me is best for those who are most interested in what their DNA says about their health and other personal characteristics.

An autosomal test usually costs between $49 and $99. Look for sales around the holidays if you want the best price. You will receive a vial in the mail which you use to provide a saliva sample. It takes about 6-8 weeks to get the results. The company will provide a link to view them, and a list of DNA relatives. DNA relatives can share their family trees and by viewing them, you can find how you are related. In my next column, I'll talk about the United States census and why it is important.

Mtn. View Vice Mayor Alison Hicks

Sanders & Sons Eucalypti Extract boxes

Vice Mayor Alison Hicks' great-great-grandfather Carl Sandner emigrated from Germany to Australia because of the Franco Prussian War. He made a fortune there selling a eucalyptus-based health remedy. With his newfound wealth, he decided to move to California and settle in Alameda County. Mr. Sandner was laid to rest at Oakland's Chapel of the Chimes, which operates as a mausoleum and live music venue to this day! Alison was born at the nearby Herrick Hospital, making her a fifth generation California Bay Area resident.

History Happening Now

Editors Note: This special "History Happening Now" column inaugurates a new MVHA newsletter tradition: offering Mountain View's out-going mayor the opportunity to write a column reflecting on the past year so that our members, and future generations reading archival copies of this newsletter, can learn from their unique perspective on recent history. We thank Councilmember Ellen Kamei (Mountain View's mayor in 2021) for agreeing to become the first mayor to write this guest column!

Mayoral Reflections on 2021

By Ellen Kamei
Mountain View Councilmember & 2021 Mayor

The end of the year is often a time of reflection—a time to look back and take stock of the past while also looking ahead to the exciting possibilities of the future. I am honored to write the first guest mayoral column reflecting on the past year.

For me, 2021 captured the City of Mountain View's spirit of #TogetherMV. Our community's perseverance, resilience, and compassion were unprecedented through our COVID-19 relief efforts, virtual programming, and essential services.

My goals as Mayor focused heavily on getting the City out of the pandemic with a smooth recovery, including significant efforts to keep people housed and small businesses from shutting down. My top priority was navigating the city and community through the pandemic and prioritizing recovery efforts like the partnership with the County of Santa Clara in providing a first-of-its-kind appointment only mass vaccination site at the Mountain View Community Center. To foster economic vitality, the City established the Small Business Action Plan and partnered with the Mountain View Chamber of Commerce to launch a buy local campaign called, Shop Safe, Shop Local to establish a Mountain View Marketplace.

This year also marked the first time the City used an "equity lens," which I championed, to identify whether any budget adjustments might benefit or impact communities of color and/or low-income residents as part of the City's Race, Equity, and Inclusion Action Plan. This effort reaffirms Mountain View as a "Community for All." Our community rallied together against the rise of racism and xenophobia towards the Asian American and Pacific Islander (AAPI) community due to the ongoing pandemic and joined the Santa Clara County Hate Crime Taskforce efforts.

Housing opportunities remained of top importance. The City sought forward-thinking partnerships and regional collaboration. In a mere six months, the City was able to complete LifeMoves Mountain View, an interim housing community, a recipient of the State's Homekey funds. As Mayor, I was honored to welcome Governor Gavin Newsom on his visit to the City to showcase Mountain View's efforts to tackle homelessness through bold, innovative actions during the pandemic.

The Federal Government's American Rescue Plan afforded the City Council to support three new COVID-19 Relief Programs: $1M for a Guaranteed Basic Income Pilot known as ElevateMV, $1M for the Mountain View Solidarity Fund/Mountain View Fondo de Solidaridad in partnership with the Los Altos Mountain View Community Foundation, and $1M for the Community Services Agency (CSA) of Mountain View Los Altos.

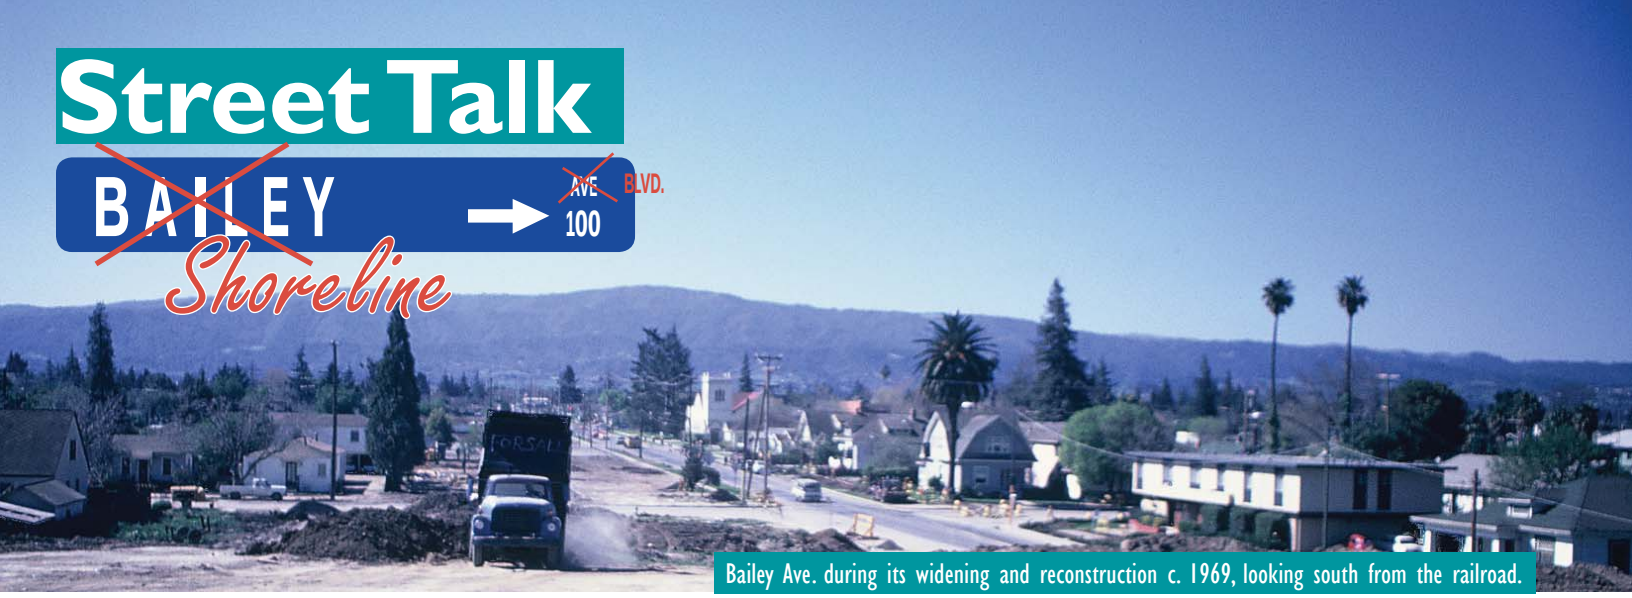

Bright spots in the pandemic were plentiful. Many of us enjoyed the closure of Castro street with the "Castro StrEATS" and "Outdoor Mountain View" programs. We also continued a hybrid model of our Spanish Language Civic Leadership Academy. Due to its popularity, a Chinese (Mandarin) Language Civic Leadership Academy will launch in spring 2022. The expansion of our leadership academy has been a passion of mine since first joining the City Council as a way for our diverse residents to learn more about the City. Some recent Academy graduates have gone on to be appointed by the City Council to serve on advisory bodies and committees, of which we now have twelve, including the Public Safety Advisory Board.

I value the voice of our youngest residents. The City of Mountain View hosted an inaugural "Mayor for A Day Contest" for our elementary and middle school students, which I spearheaded. The awardees, just like our City, staff, and residents, chose optimism and hope for our community.

Though not a traditional Mayoral year, my fondest memories were the opportunities to reunite and reconnect with residents during our Outdoor Movie Series, Summer Park Pop-ups, and Community Tree Lighting. It felt wonderful to see smiling eyes behind our masks and the ability to continue to serve our City. It was an honor to serve my hometown and I am thankful for our community's #TogetherMV spirit.

Street Talk

~~BAILEY~~ Shoreline

Bailey Ave. during its widening and reconstruction c. 1969, looking south from the railroad.

By Nick Perry
MVHA Past President

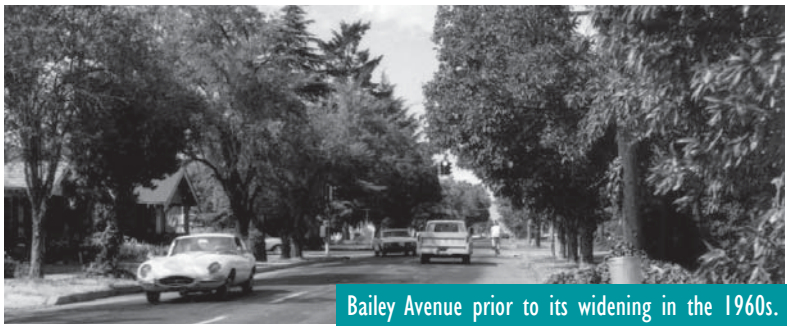

You won't find Bailey Avenue on a map of Mountain View today, but for about a century, it was the name of one of Mountain View's most prominent residential streets.

In 1887, Doctor Bowling Bailey (Doctor was his first name) expanded the town of New Mountain View by subdividing 200 acres of his land holdings immediately west of the town. Known as the "Bailey Subdivision" this new neighborhood's eastern-most street was bestowed Bailey's surname. The road extended from El Camino Real on the south to the railroad tracks on the north.

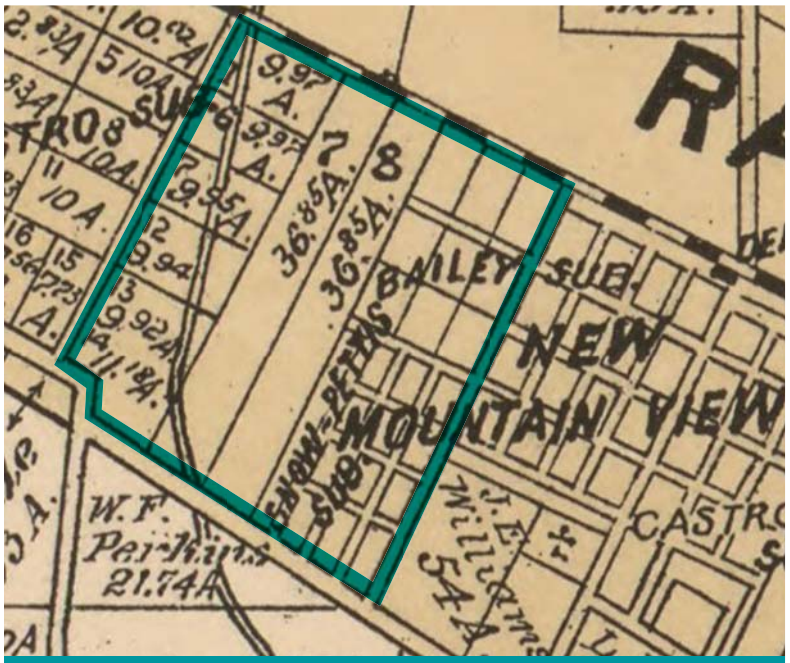

Doctor Bailey was born near the Kentucky/Tennessee border on April 1, 1831. On February 12, 1850, he left for California as part of the Gold Rush and had good success in the mines. He came to Santa Clara County in June 1853, and became a farmer in the Mountain View area. He married Margaret Hamon, a native of New Jersey, in 1858 and together they had two children, Mary B., born August 22, 1859 and John S., born August 26, 1860. In 1859, Bailey was elected to the State Assembly as a Democrat. He died in September 1888.

Around 1904, Bailey Avenue was extended across the railroad and into the new Mockbee and Weilheimer Addition; the first neighborhood north of the tracks. As Mountain View grew, Bailey Avenue's status as one of the only streets crossing the tracks turned it into an increasingly important vehicular route. This led to its complete reconstruction in the late 1960s. What was once a narrow two-lane road lined by trees and bungalows became a six lane thoroughfare. A new overpass carrying traffic over the railroad and Central Expressway, plus a new curved segment that connected Bailey Avenue with Mountain View's historic main north-south street, Stierlin Road, turned the formerly quiet residential street into one of the city's busiest traffic corridors. In 1973, the contractor who built the new Bailey Avenue received a landscape architecture award at the White House from President Richard Nixon.

Bailey Avenue's widening required the removal of dozens of homes via eminent domain, displacing 115 families, most of whom were Hispanic (including this writer's grandparents and great-grandparents). The former-backyards of homes that once stood on Bailey Avenue between El Camino Real and Villa Street are still visible today. The fate of these now city-owned parcels spurred neighbors to organize as the Shoreline West Association of Neighbors in the 1990s (a story we'll cover at our webinar on April 30!).

Bailey Avenue prior to its widening in the 1960s.

1889 map of Mountain View showing the "Bailey Subdivision" and "Snow-Pettis Subdivision" with an overlay showing the modern-day boundaries of the Shoreline West neighborhood, bounded by Shoreline Boulevard (formerly Bailey Avenue), Villa Street, Escuela Avenue, and El Camino Real. Image Source: Library of Congress

In 1988, the City Council bestowed the combined Bailey Avenue-Stierlin Road corridor with a new name: Shoreline Boulevard. The logic being that the road led to Mountain View's then-new Shoreline park and amphitheater. And hence, Bailey Avenue faded into the history books, and a historic residential street nowhere near the waters of the San Francisco Bay became Mountain View's "Shoreline" boulevard.

Mtn. View Multicultural Festival

By IdaRose Sylvester
MVHA Membership Commitee Chair

Thank you to the City of Mountain View for giving the MVHA an opportunity to host a very popular booth at the glorious return of Mountain View's Multicultural Festival, on Saturday, March 26. Hundreds of attendees filled Civic Center Plaza, watching musical and dance performances of many cultures, and many groups exhibited their programs and services. It was a perfect day in the sun, and so good to be back out among so many happy faces!

Mountain View history is the history of the many cultures who lived here and shaped our diverse city from the very beginning. We showcased this in a cultural-historical display featuring historic photos of some of Mountain View's cultural landmraks. We also had new Mountain View history themed coloring pages and crayons for historians of all ages.

Perhaps most popular was an interactive world map where people marked the places they felt represented their cultural heritage. We know cultural heritage can be a loaded topic, and have wildly different meanings to people. Culture transcends biology, history, geopolitics, and personal challenges, and we allowed people to share their thoughts with us. We watched a family mark their ancestral homeland, then mark their own complex journey to Mountain View. We saw a dad of a toddler proudly mark his home country and explain, while beaming, what this meant. The map, in its final form, proved that Mountain View remains incredibly diverse, a true strength of our community, and this diversity will continue to shape our future history.

Visitors to our booth placed red dot stickers on our world map to mark places important to their cultural heritage.

MV's Multicultural Historic Sites

Mountain View's history is shaped by many different cultures; From the native Ohlone peoples who have lived here for millennia, to the Mexican-era Castro family who gave their name to Mountain View's main street, to the people from around the globe who shaped the bountiful agricultural landscape of the Valley of Heart's Delight and the technological innovations of the Silicon Valley. On this page, we share some of the content prepared for the display board the MVHA debuted at the Mountain View Multicultural Festival.

Lupe Yñigo

RANCHO POSOLMI SITE

Location: Present-Day Moffett Field

In 1839, Lupe Yñigo, an Ohlone Indian, obtained his liberty from Mission Santa Clara and returned to the place of his birth, known as Posolmi, on the present-day site of Moffett Field. Five years later, Yñigo was formally granted the Rancho Posolmi by the Mexican government, making him one of the few local Native Americans to be granted a rancho. Yñigo lived on his rancho until his death in 1864, at the age of 83. The Bayshore/NASA VTA light rail station features artwork by Ohlone artist Linda Yamane that incorporates the portrait of Yñigo (left) and commemorates the local Ohlone peoples' continuous connection to this land.

Members of the Castro family at Villa Francisca

VILLA FRANCISCA SITE

Location: Present-day Rengstorff Park

When California was part of Mexico, much of what is now Mountain View was encompassed by the Castro family's vast 8,800 acre "Rancho Pastoria de las Borregas" (ranch of the ewe lambs' pasture). From 1911 to 1960, the Castros' home, Villa Francisca, stood where the picnic area of Rengstorff Park is now located.

The Yuen Lung Store

CHINATOWN SITE

Location: Villa and View Streets

In 1879, Chinese immigrant Yuen Lung opened a store at the northwest corner of Villa and View streets. In the decades that followed, other immigrants from China and Japan established businesses in the area, which came to be known as Mtn. View's Chinatown. The historic Chinatown was destroyed by fire in 1946, but waves of immigration from China in the later half of the twentieth century brought new Chinese-owned businesses, shops, and restaurants to Downtown Mtn. View.

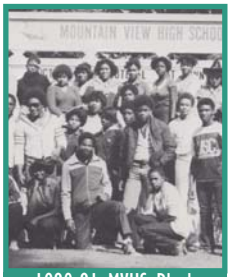

1981 Obon Festival

MTN. VIEW BUDDHIST TEMPLE

Location: 575 N. Shoreline Boulevard

Mtn. View's first Buddhist temple was established by the local Japanese immigrant community in the 1930s on the corner of Dana and View streets. The internment of Japanese residents during World War II disrupted all activities in the local Japanese Buddhist community. When they returned in 1945, community leaders began to raise funds to build a new permanent place of worship. Land was purchased on Stierlin Road in 1954 and in 1957 the first buildings in the Buddhist Temple complex were completed. Every year, the temple grounds are opened to the public for the popular midsummer Obon Festival, an annual community event honoring those who have passed away through dance, music, exhibits, crafts, and food that celebrate Japanese and Japanese American culture.

1980-81 MVHS Black Student Union

MTN. VIEW HIGH SCHOOL SITE

Location: 650 Castro Street

The Mtn. View High School campus on Castro Street was a place where the diverse population of Mtn. View came together as "MV Eagles." By the 1960s, the school was known for its ethnic and racial diversity at a time when surrounding schools were predominantly White. By the 1970s the school had well-established clubs that celebrated Mtn. View's cultural diversity including a Black Student Union, Chicano Student Union, and Filipino Youth Organization. The school's closure in 1981 deeply impacted the community, but helped racially integrate the other high schools in the Mtn. View-Los Altos Union High School District.

The Weilheimer General Store c. 1870

WEILHEIMER STORE

Location: 124 Castro Street

From the start, entrepreneurial immigrants have helped turn Mtn. View into a thriving center of commerce. One of the oldest buildings still standing in the city is the Weilheimer General Store at 124 Castro Street, built in 1870 by German-Jewish immigrant brothers, Seligman and Samuel Weilheimer. This was the Weilheimers' second store in Mtn. View; the first opened in the mid-1850s in the original town of Mtn. View centered around a stagecoach stop on El Camino Real at Grant Road.

IFES & SFV HALLS

Location: 432 Stierlin Rd. (IFES) & 361 Villa St. (SFV)

Portuguese halls can be found throughout California, built to host annual "festas" (festivals) held in honor of the Holy Ghost (Holy Spirit). Mtn. View is one of the few cities to boast two Portuguese halls: the Sociedade da Festa Velha (SFV) on Villa Street and the Irmandade da Festa do Espirito Santo (IFES) on Stierlin Road. Both halls trace the origins to a Holy Ghost "festa" held on a Portuguese dairy on Charleston Road in 1926. The tradition of holding an annual festa in honor of the Holy Ghost is an essential element of local culture on the Azore islands, where most Portuguese immigrants to California originated. In Mtn. View, festas traditionally have included a procession to Saint Joseph Catholic Church, a mass, and a large celebration at the Portuguese hall where a traditional meal of "sopas" (soup and bread) is served to all who come. In addition to serving the Portuguese community, the SFV and IFES halls have been popular locations for community gatherings, wedding receptions, and other events for people of all cultural backgrounds.

These sites are just a sampling of the many places, people, cultures that are part of our history. Are there places in Mountain View that are important to your cultural history and heritage? Do you have stories to share? Contact us at: info@mountainviewhistorical.org.

Remembrances

Nick Galiotto

Nick Galiotto, a prominent Mountain View civic leader and friend to many in the MVHA, has passed away. First hired by the Police Department in 1961, Galiotto was credited with modernizing the police agency. He served for 26 years on the police force, rising to the rank of captain. In an era when most police officers had little or no college education, Galiotto was a graduate of Santa Clara University. Later he earned his law degree from the Peninsula College of Law.

Galiotto served on the City Council for six years. He was appointed as mayor in 2006. During his time on Council he advocated for businesses, housing, parks, and environmental sustainability. His service on Council was recognized in a resolution of appreciation that was passed by the Council January 6, 2009.

He was also a longtime member of the Mountain View Kiwanis Club and the Mountain View Historical Association where he volunteered as a member of our Board of Directors for many years. We are so thankful for all the ways Nick gave back to our community and extend our deepest condolences to his friends and family.

Helene Hughes Bailey

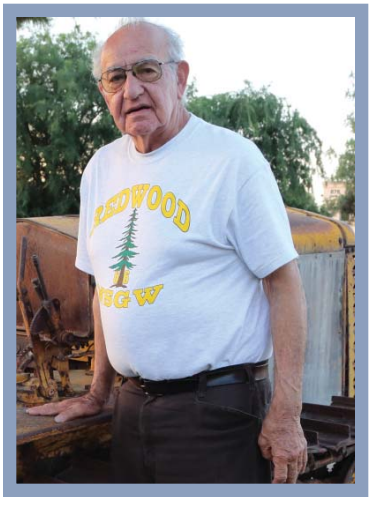

We are sad to share the news of the passing of Helene Hughes Bailey, who passed away due to complications from COVID-19 on January 27, 2022. Helene served as the MVHA's Hospitality Chair through much of the 2010s. Her gracious hospitality and creative decorations added a special touch to our quarterly events at the historic Adobe Building.

Helene was born in Palo Alto on December 15, 1940 and grew up in Mountain View on small farm located at 2106 Stierlin Road (now N. Shoreline Blvd.) on land now occupied by Shoreline Amphitheater.

Helen attended Whisman School and was a graduate of Mountain View High School on Castro Street (class of 1958). She became a hairdresser and lived abroad in several countries. After returning to California, she worked in Palo Alto and Los Altos. She was active in Quota Club and was a longtime volunteer at the Los Altos Art and Wine Festival. She was a servant in singles groups of Peninsula Bible Church, in Menlo Presbyterian Church and in youth ministry at Jubilee Christian Center. In 2017 she married Bob Bailey and moved to Rio Vista.

We offer our condolences to Helene's family and friends as she will be missed and fondly remembered.

Vincent Cortez

MVHA member Vincent Cortez, father of newsletter committee chair John Cortez and brother-in-law of our former ways & means committee chair, Richard Espinosa, peacefully passed away in his sleep on the morning of February 8, 2022.

Vincent was born in Morgan Hill and grew up in Gilroy. After a short stint in the National Guard he moved to Mountain View after meeting and marrying Dolores Anne Espinosa. Vincent worked as a janitor for various companies before starting a janitorial business with his father-in-law, John B. Espinosa. In the late 1980s he became a facilities manager for Computer Curriculum Corporation in Sunnyvale until his retirement.

In retirement Vincent volunteered for the Community Service Food Bank in Mountain View and worked part-time for the Santa Clara Sheriff Department doing event security at Stanford University. In addition to the MVHA, Vincent was a proud member of the Native Sons of the Golden West, Vintage Mustang Owners Association, Nor-Cal Shelby American Automobile Club and National Railway Historical Society.

We offer our sincere condolences to the Cortez and Espinosa families.

The MVHA welcomes the submission of remembrances of individuals who played an important role in our organization and/or Mountain View history. As space allows, we will include them in future editions of our newsletter. To submit a remembrance, email: info@mountainviewhistorical.org.

Looking Back: Photos from the Archive

This photo looks north toward the intersection of California Street and Mariposa Avenue some time in the early 1900s. It is impossible to recreate this photo today; the empty lot in the foreground was developed with homes well over a century ago. But remarkably, both homes facing California Street visible in this image still stand today. The home under construction on the far left is 1610 California Street. The home on the right is 1560 California Street. This area was originally subdivided as the Buena Vista Tract and featured large one-acre residential lots for those who wanted to live just outside of Mountain View in the countryside (the city limits, at that time were Pettis Avenue). Most of the one-acre lots were later subdivided as the area grew. Today this location lies in the heart of the Shoreline West neighborhood, the subject of our Spring meeting/webinar.
